Every successful career has its ups and downs. Mine began over 25 years ago with Shell Petroleum Development Company, a solid foundation that paved the way for me to work with various private and public organizations. However, my story truly began in 2003, when I took my first leap into project management. After undergoing several trainings and re-certifications, I managed my first project—a United Nations-sponsored initiative that brought Africans to the UK to learn valuable project management methodologies.

I was soaring. A high-flyer in my field, I built momentum, gaining more opportunities and success. But then, as the project management world evolved with rapid technological advancements, I faltered. I failed to adapt. I lost focus. Over time, I became stagnant, watching as the world moved on without me. I experienced what I call my “years in the wilderness”—years of frustration and doubt. But that’s not where my story ends. I realized that failure isn’t the opposite of success—it’s part of it. I retrained myself in the PRINCE2 methodology, embraced the IT revolution, and found new ways to leverage my years of experience. I got back in the game, stronger than before.

I understand how challenging it can be to feel left behind or unsure of the future, but I’m here to tell you that you have the power to turn it around. If you are willing to invest in your growth, the same amazing opportunities are available to you. Project management training can give you the tools you need to adapt, grow, and lead no matter where you are in your career.

My journey wasn’t easy, but it was worth it. Every challenge strengthened me, every setback became a stepping stone. And that same transformation is within your reach. Wherever you are in your professional journey, there’s always room to grow, to learn, and to succeed. All it takes is the first step.

Don’t wait until it’s too late—start today. Enhance your skills, conceptualise new strategies, and position yourself for opportunities that lie ahead. Our journeys may be different, but one thing is certain: your future is in your hands. Let’s make it a brighter one.
